

Small Yellow Bloodwood

With a striking gnarly trunk that has mottled yellow-tan bark and broad grey-green leaves, the Small Yellow Bloodwood makes a lovely addition to any streetscape. In Spring, the tree displays masses of white-yellow flowers which attract bees and nectar-loving birds. It's also a favourite of the Grey-headed Flying Fox. This smaller version is ideal for parks and streets, it adapts to full sun or part shade, will cope with a variety of soil types and is drought tolerant.

You can see a great example of a Small Yellow Bloodwood planting at 34 Page Street, Wentworthville.

 Botanic name	Corymbia eximia 'Nana'
 Origin	NSW
 Typical height	5m
 Typical width	3m
 Foliage Type	Evergreen
 Leaf	Grey-green and pointed, oval-like shape
 Bark	Fibrous or flaky
 Flowers	Cream and fluffy
 Fruit Pod	Brown capsule

