

Evergreen Ash

The Evergreen Ash is a hardy, fast-growing tree that can tolerate frost, mild drought and salty soils. It comes to life in spring when it produces a cascade of small, white flowers. It grows naturally from Bangladesh to China, extending across South-East Asia where it prefers dry slopes as well as forest and river borders.

This exotic tree is robust and well-suited to the harsh conditions that trees experience within verges making it the perfect addition to most streetscapes.

You can see examples of Evergreen Ash plantings on the corner of Sutherland Road and Glouster Avenue, North Parramatta.

a	Botanic name	Fraxinus griffithii
	Origin	South-East Asia
	Typical height	10-15m
	Typical width	4m
	Leaf	Small, light green and pointed, oval-like shape
	Bark	Smooth grey
	Flowers	White and cup-shaped
	Fruit Pod	Brown pod with small wings to help with wind dispersal

